The opening nights of the little show will be in the first week of January. An elaborate performance little Theatre since its such in 1916 by the Washester players, was former lication, but which has a two weeks' run, all depending on the hit it makes.

Movie and legitimate stage stages costinued during the war, Movie and legitimate stage stars stars of the D. A. R.'s of will be brought to the theatre from time to time, and stars appearing and Authors' club. and in the tri-cities will be entertained. Dances, parties and entertainment for the students and entertainments for the students and patrons will also be held at intervals. Mrs. Oberman hopes to open a college of dramatics and dancing later, if the tri-city public demands it.

The decorations for the theatre are being painted. Over the stage arch there is a painting symboliz-ing tragedy, comedy and music. Dancing figures are painted on the walls. The trimmings are of ivory and gold. Professor Hammel's or-

The theatre will open with a trio of New York's Little Theatre playlets of the Washington Square Players, George Middleton's "Man Masterful," and "Their Wives" and an anonymous play entitled "Over-tones." The evenings performances will open with a toe dance, the "Poppy." by three Rock Islanders and one Davenport girl, closing with a ballet dance from Offen-enbach's "The Tales of Hoffman," featuring five Rock Islanders and one Davenport girl.

After the opening, a play written by Miss Alice French, Davenport's celebrated novelist and short story vitter, may be presented. Later in the winter "Trifies," the play writ-ten by Susan Glaspell, formerly of Davenport, may be given. . Miss Margaret Schnitzer, known as Peggy La Dean of this city, is assisting Mrs. Oberman with the dancing classes. The Little Theatre offices have been opened at Room 505 Security building, Daven-lic entertainer has shown to belter advantage than in "Nobody's Pool," if which she appeared at the Burtis, Davenport, last night before a large andience. Miss Robson has been coming to this leasility for years, and has here a devoted following which never fails in extending her an affectionate welcome. She is happiest in roles that permit of exercise of a style of comedy all her own, and in her new play she apparently has all the latitude she craves, with corresponding enjoyment to those who understand and appreciate her. She is an adorable personality, one whose increasing years seem to strengthen rather than weaken her in the position she has won in the hearts of the atre-goers. Alan Dale, the New York critic, is author of her new play, and in its preparation he has kept in mind the individual talents of Miss Robson. "Nobody's Fool" affords an evening of wholesome fun, and is a pleasing relief after one has witnessed some of the iname exhibitions that are offered under the misnomer of theatricals. Miss Robson, as always, has an excellent supporting company, while scenically the production is per-
